

A Resolution Concerning Transnational Securities and Futures Fraud

Passed by the Presidents' Committee
October 1993

Consistent with its domestic statutory and regulatory provisions, the resources available and the nature and scope of the boiler room problem it experiences, each jurisdiction should consider:

1. reviewing and enhancing domestic procedures for educating the retail investing public on the dangers of boiler room fraud, through print, telecommunications or other media as may be appropriate in their jurisdictions;
2. taking steps to heighten the awareness of bona fide professionals and intermediaries and of mail and telephone forwarding services through which boiler room operators may attempt to effect or facilitate fraudulent operations;
3. prioritizing cooperation in significant cases involving transnational boiler room fraud, by providing information and enforcement assistance in a timely fashion through MOUs or other bilateral or multilateral information sharing arrangements, so that the fraudulent activities of boiler rooms and their principals may be quickly detected and halted;
4. encouraging exchange of information between authorities on an unsolicited basis concerning multijurisdictional boiler room operations;
5. developing enhanced means of cooperation between regulatory and criminal authorities, as appropriate under national law, to deter and punish boiler room fraud more effectively;
6. examining transnational legal structures that might be developed, either on a bilateral or multilateral basis, to improve or broaden existing procedures to effect timely cross-border freezes of assets of boiler rooms and their principals, including on an emergency basis;
7. studying the means for improving the enforcement of securities and futures judgments on a cross-border basis, with a view to repatriation and return to customers of funds that have been wrongfully obtained.
